Academic Model

Experiential learning.

Future professionals in the field of international relations will be at the centre of decisive issues such as the impact of social changes, increased political power of large developing countries, the role of various actors in configuring the world order, climate change and its effects on the future of international relations, the rise of religious fundamentalism and conflicts on the global stage, gender issues in international relations and global democracy.

The Experiential Learning or Challenge-Based Learning methodology that is characteristic of the School of Social Sciences and Communication at Universidad Europea is taking shape in the Challenge Based School. This school promotes a pedagogical approach that actively involves students in collaboration with professors in a real, relevant situation that is connected to their environment and involves defining a challenge and implementing a feasible solution.

Students learn by tackling a challenge that they must solve, just as they would do in their profession after completing their university studies.

What sets our Experiential Learning apart:

- Our own laboratories and clinics: Europea Media, Consulting Lab, Legal Clinic, Moot Center, Hearing Room, Edu Lab, XR Lab, Financial Hub, Criminology Workshop and International Relations Observatory.
- Over 100 partners involved: companies, institutions, law firms and NGOs.
- Development of critical competencies for the professional world.
- Transfer of knowledge between the University and Companies/Institutions.

Take charge of your own learning! Work to solve real, current challenges at the Challenge Based School.

What makes us different?

Global Bachelor's Degree in International Relations

London School of Economics & Political Science

Benefit from two international placements thanks to our mobility agreements with universities worldwide. In your third year, you will be able to study at prestigious universities in Europe, the Americas or Asia. In your fourth year, as a Global student in International Relations, you will study at exclusive and world-renounwed destinations such a the London School of Economics and Political Science.

Mandatory internship

You will undertake an internship in a public or private institution such as the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, a Spanish Embassy, a European Union Institution, a cooperation organization or an international foundation. You will have the chance to put into practice what you have learned and to strengthen skills such as teamwork, leadership or adaptability.

100 % international environment

Be international from the very first moment, inside and outside the classroom. Share learning experiences with students from other countries and with professors with extensive international experience that will bring you closer to the different professional dimensions in the international arena. Join the UEM's International Relations Club (IRClub), which brings together students interested in international relations and international affairs, from a social, professional and academic perspective. The IRClub carries out activities of all kinds that range from meetings with high-level personalities, organization of conferences and seminars, participation in MUNs in Spain and abroad, etc. Write and reflect on current affairs at the International Relations Observatory, our digital magazine dedicated to the analysis and research on international affairs. Students, professors and experts in International Relations come together in this university forum to discuss and inform on issues of global relevance.

Methodology: challenge based school

Experience our Challenge Based Learning methodology and learn how to professionally interact with the different agents that comprise the international context: states, public and private institutions, multinational companies, international organizations, NGOs, etc. Attend seminars with security and defense specialists, experts in global economics and Diplomats, and visit international organizations and strategic spaces for the understanding of International Relations. Acquire specific skills through courses like International Negotiation Workshop, International Cooperation Projects or Current Affairs Observatory.
